Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Preamble

Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,

Whereas disregard and contempt for human rights have resulted in barbarous acts which have outraged the conscience of mankind, and the advent of a world in which human beings shall enjoy freedom of speech and belief and freedom from fear and want has been proclaimed as the highest aspiration of the common people,

Whereas it is essential, if man is not to be compelled to have recourse, as a last resort, to rebellion against tyranny and oppression, that human rights should be protected by the rule of law,

Whereas it is essential to promote the development of friendly relations between nations,

Whereas the peoples of the United Nations have in the Charter reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Whereas Member States have pledged themselves to achieve, in co-operation with the United Nations, the promotion of universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Whereas a common understanding of these rights and freedoms is of the greatest importance for the full realisation of this pledge,

Now, therefore,

The General Assembly,
Proclaims this Universal Declaration of Human Rights as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations, to the end that every individual and every organ of society, keeping this Declaration constantly in mind, shall strive by teaching and education to promote respect for these rights and freedoms and by progressive measures, national and international, to secure their universal and effective recognition and observance, both among the peoples of Member States themselves and among the peoples of territories under their jurisdiction.

Article 1

All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.

Article 2

Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status.

Furthermore, no distinction shall be made on the basis of the political, jurisdictional or international status of the country or territory to which a person belongs, whether it be independent, trust, non-self-governing or under any other limitation of sovereignty.

Article 3

Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person.

Article 4

No one shall be held in slavery or servitude; slavery and the slave trade shall be prohibited in all their forms.

Article 5

No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 6

Everyone has the right to recognition everywhere as a person before the law.

Article 7

All are equal before the law and are entitled without any discrimination to equal protection of the law. All are entitled to equal protection against any discrimination in violation of this Declaration and against any incitement to such discrimination.
Article 8

Everyone has the right to an effective remedy by the competent national tribunals for acts violating the fundamental rights granted him by the constitution or by law.

Article 9

No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest, detention or exile.

Article 10

Everyone is entitled in full equality to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal, in the determination of his rights and obligations and of any criminal charge against him.

Article 11

1. Everyone charged with a penal offence has the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law in a public trial at which he has had all the guarantees necessary for his defence.

2. No one shall be held guilty of any penal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a penal offence, under national or international law, at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the penal offence was committed.

Article 12

No one shall be subjected to arbitrary interference with his privacy, family, home or correspondence, nor to attacks upon his honour and reputation. Everyone has the right to the protection of the law against such interference or attacks.

Article 13

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of each State.

2. Everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country.

Article 14

1. Everyone has the right to seek and to enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution.

2. This right may not be invoked in the case of prosecutions genuinely arising from non-political crimes or from acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. Everyone has the right to a nationality.
2. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality nor denied the right to change his nationality.

Article 16

1. Men and women of full age, without any limitation due to race, nationality or religion, have the right to marry and to found a family. They are entitled to equal rights as to marriage, during marriage and at its dissolution.

2. Marriage shall be entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

3. The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State.

Article 17

1. Everyone has the right to own property alone as well as in association with others.

2. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property.

Article 18

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance.

Article 19

Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers.

Article 20

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association.

2. No one may be compelled to belong to an association.

Article 21

1. Everyone has the right to take part in the government of his country, directly or through freely chosen representatives.

2. Everyone has the right to equal access to public service in his country.

3. The will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government; this will shall be expressed in periodic and genuine elections which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures.
Article 22

Everyone, as a member of society, has the right to social security and is entitled to realisation, through national effort and international co-operation and in accordance with the organisation and resources of each State, of the economic, social and cultural rights indispensable for his dignity and the free development of his personality.

Article 23

1. Everyone has the right to work, to free choice of employment, to just and favourable conditions of work and to protection against unemployment.

2. Everyone, without any discrimination, has the right to equal pay for equal work.

3. Everyone who works has the right to just and favourable remuneration ensuring for himself and his family an existence worthy of human dignity, and supplemented, if necessary, by other means of social protection.

4. Everyone has the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.

Article 24

Everyone has the right to rest and leisure, including reasonable limitation of working hours and periodic holidays with pay.

Article 25

1. Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family, including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control.

2. Motherhood and childhood are entitled to special care and assistance. All children, whether born in or out of wedlock, shall enjoy the same social protection.

Article 26

1. Everyone has the right to education. Education shall be free, at least in the elementary and fundamental stages. Elementary education shall be compulsory. Technical and professional education shall be made generally available and higher education shall be equally accessible to all on the basis of merit.

2. Education shall be directed to the full development of the human personality and to the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. It shall promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among all nations, racial or religious groups, and shall further the activities of the United Nations for the maintenance of peace.
3. Parents have a prior right to choose the kind of education that shall be given to their children.

Article 27

1. Everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits.

2. Everyone has the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from any scientific, literary or artistic production of which he is the author.

Article 28

Everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration can be fully realised.

Article 29

1. Everyone has duties to the community in which alone the free and full development of his personality is possible.

2. In the exercise of his rights and freedoms, everyone shall be subject only to such limitations as are determined by law solely for the purpose of securing due recognition and respect for the rights and freedoms of others and of meeting the just requirements of morality, public order and the general welfare in a democratic society.

3. These rights and freedoms may in no case be exercised contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Article 30

Nothing in this Declaration may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein.

Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998

Background

In the Agreement reached between governments and political parties in Northern Ireland in 1998, the section dealing with Rights, Safeguards and Equality of Opportunity included a commitment to a statutory obligation on public authorities. This commitment was then implemented through Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. It was also reflected in the Northern Ireland Executive’s Programme for Government which set out the government’s vision of Northern Ireland as a “peaceful, fair and inclusive community”, requiring both the promotion of equality and working to improve community relations.

The Section 75 statutory duties

Under Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, public authorities are required “to have due regard to the need to promote equality of opportunity between persons of different religious belief, political opinion, racial group, age, marital status or sexual orientation; between men and women generally; between persons with a disability and persons without; and between persons with dependants and persons without”. These are commonly referred to as the nine equality categories.

Public authorities are also required “to have regard to the desirability of promoting good relations between persons of different religious belief, political opinion or racial group”.

These statutory duties are designed to ensure that equality and good relations considerations are made central to public authorities’ policy development. The duties have the potential to make a real difference to the lives of people in Northern Ireland since those affected by policy decisions must be consulted and their interests taken into account in decision making. This provides an opportunity for all sections of the community to participate in public policy making right from the start of the process.

Public authorities

Section 75 applies to all public authorities which are subject to the Section 75 statutory duties. These include government departments, Health Boards and Trusts, Education and Library Boards, further education colleges, universities, local councils, etc. Some bodies which have a UK-wide remit are subject to Section 75 in relation to their work which affects Northern Ireland. For a list of relevant public authorities, please see the Commission’s website – www.equalityni.org.

Equality schemes

Each public authority is required to draw up an equality scheme which sets out how it proposes to fulfil the statutory duties over a five year period. This scheme must be submitted to the Equality Commission for approval. An equality scheme must set out how the public authority will identify where it impacts on equality of opportunity most significantly, how it will assess the equality impact of its policies, and its arrangements for consultation with those affected by the policies, amongst other things.

Equality impact assessment

If a public authority’s assessment of the impact of a policy shows a possible “adverse impact” on individuals from any equality category, it must consider how this impact might be reduced, including changing to an alternative policy to better promote equality of opportunity. Consultation with those affected, or likely to be affected, is central to the effectiveness of the statutory duties. Authorities must consult on the impact of policy decisions and alternative policies as well as publish the outcomes of impact assessments.

Role of the Equality Commission

As well as advising on and approving equality schemes, the Equality Commission is responsible for monitoring and overseeing the effectiveness of Section 75. Each year, the Commission produces an overall progress report which summarises progress made by public authorities as reported in their annual reports to the Commission. An audit of progress on implementing the good relations duty under Section 75, covering the period 2000-2003, has also been published. These reports are published on our website – www.equalityni.org.
Complaints
The Equality Commission also has a role in relation to complaints. Generally, a person who wishes to complain that a public authority has not acted in compliance with its equality scheme must first raise the matter with the public authority. Each equality scheme sets out the authority’s complaints procedure and contact point. If the person complaining is not satisfied with the response of the public authority, they may then complain to the Equality Commission. Complaints must be made to the Commission within 12 months of the issue arising. The Commission’s procedure for dealing with Section 75 complaints is on our website.

The Commission can investigate complaints and issue a report. If a complaint is upheld, the Commission may recommend a course of action which the public authority must follow. If recommended action is not taken within a reasonable timescale, the Commission may refer the matter to the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State may give directions to the public authority.

For reports on complaints investigated by the Equality Commission, please see the Publications section on our website.

Further information and advice
The Commission has produced a range of guidance related to Section 75 for public authorities and others which is available on our website. The website also has information about the Commission’s investigation powers and about how we deal with complaints. If you do not find the information you need on the website or in one of our publications, you can contact the Statutory Duty Team.

If you wish to make a complaint about a public body’s failure to comply with its statutory duty obligations under Section 75, you should contact the Statutory Duty Investigation Team in our Strategic Enforcement Division.
